1. Four trainloads of German specialists arrived in Leipzig from the USSR between 26 November and 2 December 1953 at two day intervals. 25X1
2. The first group comprised chiefly Zeiss personnel: the second was composed of former Jumo employees from Kuibyshev, who had been transferred to Ostashkov; the third group were Jumo people from Kuibyshev; and the fourth group, former Junkers and Siebel personnel from Podberezye. Most of the personnel from Podberezye were work shops personnel. Once they had reached Leipzig, all returnees were taken to the Hotel National, where they were asked to state the work they wished to undertake.
3. Included in the Podberezye group were six of von Baade's men, whom he had designated to represent him in the distribution of employment. During the discussion between the staff from an unidentified Berlin ministry and von Baade's representatives, von Baade and his wishes were disregarded.
4. Also in the above conference was former chief of the Hauptverwaltung, (former Ministerium fuer Maschinenbau, Dessau), Meister, who informed the men that they would be required for duties in the Dresden area at a future date. Many objected and stated that they wanted to return to Dessau where they had homes, but he replied that this would be useless as there would be no employment facilities in their specialized sphere. The Junkers aircraft factory would never be reconstructed as it lay in the American air corridor and could be easily photographed.
